The Editor-in-Chief of The American Journal of Public Health is looking for a student to serve as an editor for the Journal in a one year, unpaid fellowship program to start in March.

The intern will shadow and be coached by associate editors for the Journal. The student’s tenure will begin immediately upon hire. Job responsibilities/duties can be performed remotely. The Association will sponsor travel twice a year (to the APHA Annual Meeting and to the Journal’s annual Spring Meeting in Washington, D.C.) for the selected appointee.

Requirements:

- APHA membership (Visit https://www.apha.org/become-a-member to become a member)
- Interest/experience in editing and editorial activities.

Please note: AJPH has asked schools to consider providing academic credit for this 12 month appointment.

This is a great opportunity to:

- Contribute to the production of one of the largest public health journals in the world
- Network with individuals and other students in your field
- Gain practical experience with editing, technical writing, and publishing processes.

APPLY TODAY!!

DEADLINE: February 5, 2018

If you are interested in applying, please send a cover letter, resume and three references (email or contact number)

To: MARWA.FADLALLA@APHA.ORG
American Journal of Public Health – Call for Student Editor

AJPH is searching for a student to serve as an editor for the Journal in a one year, unpaid fellowship program. This student will work closely with the journal office and one of our Associate Editors.

Preference will be given to individuals with:

- Master’s degree or higher (those currently pursuing an MPH or related degree are welcome to apply)
- A background in public health;
- Previous editorial experience;
- Social media presence.

The responsibilities of the selected student will include:

- Working with several Associate Editors to review submitted manuscripts to determine their relevance to the diverse AJPH audience and appropriateness for further peer review.
- Carefully suggesting suitable referees and monitoring the review process.
- Providing timely feedback on the contents and readability of manuscripts.
- Working with the Associate Editors to generate recommendations to be rendered by the Editor-in-Chief.
- Working with the Editor-in-Chief to identify possible editorialists for articles accepted for publication.

Job responsibilities/duties can be performed remotely. The student’s tenure will begin in March and can be extended for another year depending on performance evaluation and student status. The Association will sponsor travel twice a year (to the APHA Annual Meeting and to the Journal’s annual Spring Meeting in Washington, DC) for the selected appointee. AJPH has asked schools to consider offering academic credit (up to 3 course credits) as compensation for this one-year appointment.

To Apply:

Please submit a resume’, a list of three references (email and/or contact number), and a brief cover letter describing your interest in serving as a Student Editor for the journal as well as prior editorial experience to marwa.fadlalla@apha.org. Applications will be accepted until February 5, 2018. Students must be a member of APHA to apply (visit https://www.apha.org/become-a-member to become a member).

EEO/AA. APHA is strongly and actively committed to diversity in its workplace