The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases

NIAID Emerging Leaders in Data Science Fellowship

Accepting Applications September 1, 2017

As an ORISE Research Participant in the NIAID Emerging Leaders in Data Science Fellowship Program in the OSMO Office of Data Science and Emerging Technologies, the participant will receive training and hands-on-experience in applying and managing big data, bioinformatics strategies and computational platforms and tool development to study infectious, immunological, and allergic diseases in both extramural and intramural divisions at NIAID and will receive training in the intersection and management of big data and disease-oriented data-intense research efforts.

This fellowship opportunity offers

- A one-year residency program for Science and Engineering graduates
- A program combining curriculum and project work conveniently located at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases
- Research Participants will be provided with a stipend, travel and training allowance and health benefits.

Opportunity Details and to Apply:

- The Program will be accepting applications beginning September 1, 2017. Recent graduates are invited to apply
- Submit an on-line application at:

Eligibility:

- Bachelors or Masters earned within five years of July start date
- U. S. citizenship required.

Application Deadline: October 15, 2017