The Department of Statistics at the University of California, Davis, anticipates one or more openings for a part-time or full-time Lecturer for the delivery of the department’s undergraduate curriculum during the 2015-2016 academic year depending on the instructional needs of the department. The courses to be taught may include introductory statistics as well as other lower and upper division undergraduate courses. Applicants must possess a Ph.D. in statistics and have prior experience teaching statistics (preferably at the college/university level). Salary is commensurate with the candidate’s training and experience. These positions are covered by a collective bargaining agreement.

Application review will continue until position(s) are filled. For more information see http://www-stat.ucdavis.edu/resources/employment/index.html.

To apply, go to https://recruit.ucdavis.edu/apply/JPF00497

To ensure full consideration, completed applications should be submitted by 04/30/2015. UC Davis is an affirmative action/equal employment opportunity employer and is dedicated to recruiting a diverse faculty community. We welcome all qualified applicants to apply, including women, minorities, individuals with disabilities and veterans.