A colleague at Albert Einstein is moving to UCSF and is seeking a master-level biostatistician/epidemiologist. Students can reach out to Dr. Jorge Kizer directly at Jorge.r.kizer@gmail.com with their CV.

------

I have accepted a position at UCSF and Chief of Cardiology at the San Francisco VA Health Care System. This is an exciting opportunity with a substantial research component, which will involve continuing my program as well as building the careers of young investigators in cardiovascular disease.

I wanted to reach out to you, because we’re looking to hire a master’s level biostatistician to join our section. We would preferably like at least 2 years of work experience, but this is not a requirement.

Clinical and population-based research is already thriving at the VA in General Internal Medicine and Infectious Diseases, and we hope to bolster the same in Cardiology. The scholarly environment would be highly propitious for academic growth.

If you know of anyone at Hopkins or elsewhere who might be interested in such a position in San Francisco, could you kindly have them reach out to me with their CV?

Thanks in advance for your help.
