Applications are invited for a Tenure-Track Assistant Professor position in the Department of Mathematics at Bradley University beginning August 2019.

Candidates must have college-level teaching experience and possess a Ph.D. in mathematics or statistics by the start date. Preference will be given to candidates who are broadly trained and have a strong commitment to undergraduate teaching. Preference will be given to candidates with a Ph.D. in statistics, but candidates with a Ph.D. in mathematics and a strong background in statistics will be considered. The candidate is expected to teach across all levels of the undergraduate curriculum. An active research program and scholarly publication are required for tenure and advancement. Review of applications will begin on September 17, 2018 and continue until the position is filled. Other positions may become available in the future.

Please submit all application materials through the MathJobs.org website. A completed application consists of the AMS cover letter, a letter of application, vita, a copy of each graduate transcript, description of research, statement of teaching philosophy, and three current letters of recommendation (at least one of which addresses teaching and one research). Information regarding how the candidate can contribute to diversity in teaching, professional development, or service should be provided either within the letter of application or in a stand-alone diversity statement.

Employment with Bradley University is contingent upon satisfactory completion of a criminal background check.
