

Public Health Leadership Opportunity

United Against Inequities in Disease (UAID) is a national non-profit organization that empowers students and communities across the United States to reduce health inequities (unjust and preventable differences in health outcomes between groups of people).

As a public health organization dedicated to long-term sustainability and impact, UAID leads innovative local community projects throughout the country. Please visit www.uaid.org for more details.

UAID is pleased to announce open intern positions on the UAID National Board of Directors. If you are interested in social justice and are looking for a leadership opportunity in public health, please apply here by July 5, 2021: <http://www.uaid.org/internapplication>. Preference will be given to those who apply early.

If you are interested in starting a chapter of UAID on your campus, please submit an application through the following link: <http://www.uaid.org/chapterapplication>.
